

Short Course 4: Bringing the Military into the Political Science Curriculum

Co-Sponsors: Committee for the Analysis of Military Operations & Strategy (CAMOS),
Women in International Security, and the Women & Politics Section

Contact Person: Judith Stiehm, Department of Political Science
Florida International University, Miami, FL 33199
E: stiehmj@fiu.edu P: (305) 348-2227

Registration: Faculty - $15; Grad Students - $5
Please make check payable to Judith Stiehm at Florida International University.

Time: 9:30 AM – 5:00 PM

Location: On the premises of the APSA Annual Meeting

Instructors: TBD

The morning session will involve a simulation similar to those used by the military in planning exercises.

The afternoon session will be divided into two sections. The first will consist of presentations on several critical subjects in the form of modules that can be used by instructors in courses they are already teaching. Topics will include: Military Culture and Mission, Civil-Military Relations, Military Reach and Capacity and Current Issues.

The second section will involve a roundtable with faculty already teaching such courses and the distribution of syllabi already being used by those faculty and others.