First, this great and glorious country was built up by political parties; second; parties can't hold together if their workers don't get the offices when they win; third, if the parties go to pieces, the government they built up must go to pieces, too; fourth, then, there'll be h--- to pay.

--George Washington Plunkitt
Ward Boss of Tammany Hall

We will address a variety of issues pertaining to the role of elections in American politics and the roles of political parties in the electoral process and in American government in general.

Topics to be discussed include:

- public opinion
- voting behavior
- the roles of party organizations, interest groups, and the mass media in elections
- money and politics
- political parties and the governmental process
- political parties and elections as sources of continuity and vehicles for change in American politics
