

APSA Datasets and Research Resources

APSA's Research Department conducts research on the political science profession, evaluates APSA programming, and supports member research needs, including collaborating with members undertaking research on the profession in their own capacity as researchers. On the APSA website, we produce reports on APSA surveys and other data, publish insights into our research, and maintain interactive data dashboards. Explore our resources at <https://apsanet.org/resources/data-on-the-profession/> or contact us at surveys@apsanet.org.

Data Requests

APSA's Research Department responds to requests from members and other stakeholders for data on issues related to the profession and the discipline of political science. Requests can be submitted via the APSA website.

Research Reports

We publish regular reports on topics pertinent to the political science profession. These reports are publicly available on our website and fall into three main categories: Employment and the Job Market; Graduate Student Placements and Characteristics; and Enrollments, Curricula, and Faculty.

Departmental and Graduate Placement Dashboards

Summarizes aggregated data on the profession, including faculty, salaries, enrollments, incoming students, and placement outcomes in the job market.

eJobs Dashboard

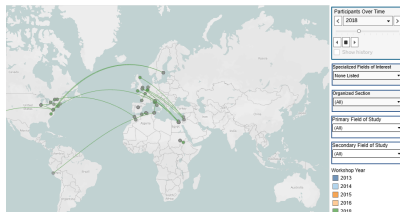

Analyzes over a decade of job postings on APSA's eJobs platform, including tenure-track status, location, and primary field of postings.

Membership and Organized Section Dashboards

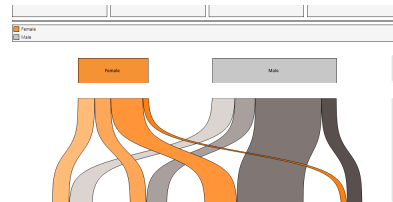

Outlines member and organized sections demographic data, enabling comparisons across sections and members using nearly a decade of data.

MENA Dashboard

Provides a look at the fields of study and locations of APSA's MENA Workshops alumni.

P-WAM Dashboard

Breaks down tenure status, race, and gender in political science departments at PhD-granting institutions across the U.S.

Departmental Survey

Graduate Placement Survey

eJobs Data

P-Wam

Membership

Datasets from APSA's major data sources—the Departmental Survey, Graduate Placement Survey, PWAM Survey, Membership Survey, and eJobs platform—are available for download on the APSA website. Datasets are available from 2015 to the present and encompass a wide range of data about the state of the profession both within and beyond the academy.

We Rely on You!

Our team relies on your participation to collect our data. We use your invaluable feedback to improve the resources we offer, develop our programs, and provide you with timely and accurate information on the profession. Please add surveys@apsanet.org to your email address book, and keep an eye out for our forthcoming Annual Meeting and Member Impact surveys. Five minutes of your time results in better data quality for everyone!